Supervision Pod

Deepen your reflection and develop your coaching

You've completed your coach training and started, or recently returned to, working with clients. You're exploring questions, such as:

> How do I help my clients get the most out of our time together? How do I know what difference I'm making? Should I be offering something more?

The Supervision Pod is a small group where you can explore your coaching with a supervisor and fellow coaches.

Together, we'll reflect on your work with clients, notice what you might be missing, and develop your understanding of yourself as a coach.

Group supervision can offer you:

- A clearer sense of the coach you're becoming.
- Greater trust in your judgement as a coach.
- Increased confidence in the value you offer as a coach.
- Fresh perspectives, helping you see possibilities you might not have considered.

We might explore themes like:

- Your coaching presence: Understanding your strengths, tendencies, assumptions and blind spots.
- The coaching relationship: Navigating ethical dilemmas, boundaries, and tricky client dynamics.
- Professional boundaries: Recognising the limits of your role and competence, and when something sits beyond them.
- Establishing yourself as a coach: Exploring the kind of coaching you want to do, who with, and the different ways you might develop your career as a coach.

Natalie Tucker, Coach, Trainer & Supervisor

Why choose me as your supervisor?

I'm a coach, supervisor, trainer and ICF Mentor Coach. I've completed training accredited by the ICF, AC and EMCC, at Professional Coach and Senior Practitioner levels. Through these roles, I've supported dozens of emerging coaches to deepen their understanding and application of coaching skills.

Rather than offering a formula for how to coach, I'll help you explore what's happening in your work, consider different perspectives and develop your own judgement.

"Natalie is a steady presence who can guide you to the next version of yourself as a coach."
